Pope hails city

By Steven Martens
Staff writer

After entering the Kiel Center in St. Louis to a thundering ovation from 22,000 young Catholics, Pope John Paul II encouraged young people to be strong in their faith and to be

"the light of the world." "Young friends," the pope said, "in the days and weeks and years ahead, for as long as you remember this evening, remember that the pope came to the United States, to the City of St. Louis, to call the young people of America to Christ, to invite you to follow him." By the time the pope arrived about 6:30 p.m., the young people had been at the Kiel Center all day, participating in a

School days get longer

Storms force changes

Students in the Granite City School District will probably not have to spend summer days in school making up for recent snowstorms, but their regular day will be extended for the rest of the year.

At Tuesday's meeting, the School Board approved extending the day to make up for five snow days taken in early January. However, the extension of hours is subject to agreement with the teacher's union.

The new schedule will go into effect

Catholic schools mark special week

Faith subject of education

By Scott Cousins
Staff writer

It is about faith. Not just on Sunday, during meals or before going to bed. Next week, St. Elizabeth and Holy Family Catholic schools in Granite City will celebrate Catholic Schools Week.

Both Sister Angelene and Linda Logan, principals of Holy Family and St. Elizabeth respectively, said faith is the key to their schools.

"Faith is not just extraneous to our lives, it needs to be integrated into every aspect of our life," said Sister Angelene. "It's not something we must practice on Sunday, or before we go to bed, or before meals, but with every aspect of our day."

She said the Catholic philosophy is integrated into every subject matter. "We learn with an eye to faith," she said. "It should produce young people who live their beliefs, who are responsible, who are respectful toward others and the property of others and are faith-filled."

Logan agreed. "Our faith is the foundation of our school, a strong Catholic identity is important to ensure a bright future for our students and our church," she said. "Hopefully, we're turning out future community members with high morals and the strong faith that would create a strong community."

She said that "faith-driven environment" is the primary reason parents choose Catholic schools.

Both schools have an entire week of activities planned.

At St. Elizabeth School, there will be a different activity each day from Sunday, Jan. 31 through Friday, Feb. 5.

On Sunday, students will lector, carry banners and offer gifts at the 10:30 a.m. Mass. During the Mass, one student will read an essay on "what St. Elizabeth Means to Me."

Monday will be Wacky-Tacky day. Students are to wear their "wacky" clothes.

Costello: Steel being taken seriously

By Scott Cousins
Staff writer

The Clinton administration has finally started to take the dumping of foreign steel seriously, according to U.S. Rep. Jerry Costello, D-Belleville.

On Monday, Costello said the U.S. government has filed an official complaint against Russia and has put U.S. steel purchasers on notice that they face very high tariffs and other economic sanctions if they purchase illegally or improperly imported steel.

He also said Japan has responded favorably to the pressure.

"We just received export reports for December," he said. "There has been a dramatic drop for the month of December since they were put on notice, so they are responding to the action taken."

According to the U.S. Commerce Department, the second quarter of 1998 showed the highest steel import volumes in U.S. history. Steel imports from Japan during the first six months of 1998 increased 113.7 percent over January to June 1997, and imports from Korea increased 89.5 percent during the same period.

The International Trade Commission recently approved a preliminary staff recommendation saying that foreign companies are dumping subsidized steel.

Subsidies violate basic trade agreements and allow other countries to dramatically undercut U.S. steel prices. If the companies are found to be dumping steel by the Commerce Department, those imports could face tariffs of up to 200 percent.

In addition, Clinton had announced $300 million in tax credits for companies hurt by the dumping, but industry and union officials were extremely critical of the measures.

Last week, Costello and other members of the Steel Caucus met with U.S. Commerce Secretary William Daley and the nation's trade representative, Charlene Barshefsky, to seek tougher action against those companies, and companies purchasing illegally or improperly imported steel.

"I believe we fully have their attention and they realize how serious the problem is," Costello said.

"I am pleased the administration understands the seriousness of the crisis and that they have filed complaints against Russia and put Japan on notice," he said. "But it should not take our government this long to resolve a problem when another country violates trade agreements."

"It could take months, and we in the Steel Caucus believe they ought to be legislation to correct that," he added.

Several bills have already been introduced in Congress and others are in the works to deal with similar problems in foreign trade, although Costello said they would have little effect on the current situation.

Costello said he has not endorsed any of the already-proposed legislation yet.

Pope's visit is fitting tribute to St. Louis

Area has been strong Catholic community from the beginning

St. Louis and our entire Metro East area witnessed an historic occasion this week with the visit of Pope John Paul II. An occasion with a capital "O." A once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to actually see and hear the head of the Roman Catholic Church for most of those who lined the parade routes each day, with early estimates of expected crowds ranging from 100,000 to a million people.

Carol Clarkin

It was bound to be an impressive occasion, according to schedules announced last week, beginning with a meeting with President Bill Clinton upon his arrival, followed by the first parade to Kiel Center for a youth rally, attended by about 21,000. An anticipated 104,000 people were expected to attend a Mass at the Trans World Dome Wednesday, the largest indoor crowd ever to witness an event in the United States, according to officials.

All 11 American Cardinals will accompany the Pope to St. Louis for the visit, and who's counting the number of Archbishops and Bishops expected?

From the standpoint of history, it's fitting that St. Louis and our area be a papal visit, and not just because the city was named for a French king and saint some 13 years before our Revolution. The Holy Family Log Church in Cahokia, the oldest west of the Mississippi, was established 64 years before Pierre LaSalle set up his fur trading post on the other side of the river. It's been a strongly Catholic community from the beginning.

I'm only sorry that I wasn't among those viewing the parades or attending the Mass at the Dome, but common sense tells me it wouldn't have been a great idea for me. I truly hope that at least some of my Catholic friends were able to get a choice spot along one of the parade routes.

And I also hope, with all my heart, that a certain St. Louis Baptist minister changed his mind and didn't show up either. I don't know the man's name or that of his particular church. He appeared a little over two weeks ago on a brief segment of a St. Louis TV news show, early evening, as I recall, and since I wasn't expecting what he had to say, I simply didn't catch names.

At any rate, he planned to rain on the Pope's parade with what I consider a totally tasteless appearance, together with those of his congregation he could persuade to joining him.

Although he claimed to both respect and admire John Paul II, as well as Catholicism as a faith, he wanted to organize a missionary group from among his own church members to proselytize among the thousands of people lining the parade route. Bizarre. Rude. Insulting. For that matter, possibly dangerous to his own health and welfare, depending upon the individuals he decides to try to convert.

His agenda reflects no respect or admiration for the Pope, as he professed on the news interview, but simply a total lack of good manners and respect for the rights of others.

I hope his congregation refused to cooperate. I hope someone, somehow, talked him out of this crude scheme. If they failed, perhaps some tough Irish cop will succeed.

Visit evokes fond memories

Collinsville woman, husband saw pope during 1979 trip to Ireland

Pope John Paul II's visit to St. Louis brings back fond memories of the trip my husband, Milt, and I took to Ireland, Scotland and London in 1979.

In Chicago, we took our seats in a 727 Aer Lingus plane wondering who would occupy the third seat, and shortly before the plane took off, we met him: the Rev. Eugene Kenny, priest of St. Bernard's Church in Bnpre, Kan. He apparently was the priest of several country Catholic churches situated among the wheat fields of Kansas.

We asked Kenny why he left Ireland to be a priest in the United States. He told us that there are so many young men in Ireland who enter the priesthood that the Church has no parishes for them. They are sent to the United States, and in New York, they are assigned to parishes that are hard to fill.

Kenny was going to Ireland to perform the wedding ceremony of a niece, but I can't remember him mentioning that the pope would be in Ireland at the same time. The priest treated us to some wine and gave us some good advice for our travels. Before we all fell off to sleep on our night flight, I felt we had a friend in this handsome, dark-haired priest. The last time our mail carrier brought a message from him was in 1982.

We landed at Shannon Airport, where we picked up our Ford Escort just about the time the clouds burst with a downpour. It was raining so hard that we pulled off the road for a bit. We visited Cork, with its young, handsome, dark-haired police officers; kissed the Blarney Stone; and spent the night at Ballymaloe House, a part of the old Geraldine Castle of the 14th century, eating in the Yeats Room that holds a collection of paintings by Jack Yeats, brother of the poet. Milt also only mentioned the Waterford candlesticks we bought for our anniversary the following day when we had an anniversary dinner in a quiet pub at Rossclare, located on the east coast of southern Ireland.

We spent the night in a beautiful bed and breakfast that was so cold that we had to cover our heads when we went to bed. At about 6:30 a.m., we could hear the heating pipes popping, and eventually the room started to heat up. From there we could see cars loading the ferry for a trip to Wales. Maybe it was because we were high on a cliff by the St. George's Channel, but we did know it was the coldest night and day we had spent in Ireland.

After visiting Powerscourt Estate and Gardens in County Wicklow, where we also enjoyed our tea and scones, we got back in our Escort, turned on the radio and heard for the second time only that Dublin was ready for the pope. Suddenly there was a news flash that cars would not be allowed on the streets of Dublin after 4 p.m., although buses and cabs would. A little after 4 p.m., we arrived at our hotel, four miles east of the center of Dublin. Our first thought was to call the car rental company to find out what we should do with the car. The company spokesman told us to leave the keys at the desk and they would pick up the car later. After an early dinner we left the hotel for a bus ride to the city center.

Wow! It was like Mardi Gras. With all the Catholics in Ireland, I couldn't believe that the pope had never visited there. The bus soon filled and we were let out on the main street of Dublin at the bus center. I couldn't believe the people, all so jubilant. Another bus pulled up and a 18- or 19-year-old boy alighted with about six young boys. I remarked to my husband how nice it was that this young man was bringing these young boys to see all this excitement. About five minutes later Milt was hit hard by a young boy who had his hands covered with a shawl, while the second boy slipped his hand into Milt's back pocket. I hadn't known that he had switched his bilfold to his jacket while we were on the bus. It was our first encounter with pickpockets, sometimes called fingersmiths.

We spent the evening people-watching and visiting pubs, and upon our desire to return to the hotel, we found buses had just quit for the day and we had to wait until 1 a.m. for a cab, still leaving many people to enjoy the revelry.

The next morning Milt went to the lobby for a paper and he returned all excited telling me that people were walking down the street seven abreast. He questioned whether these people could walk four miles into town and then an added four or five miles to Phoenix Park where the pope held Mass. He had noted that some were too old for that long walk. The newspaper the next day did report that at least five people had heart attacks and a like number of babies were born at Phoenix Park.

We knew we had to walk into town and after breakfast, we did just that. Having a little heart trouble earlier in the year, I knew I would have to stop often to rest. This walk was a real education in architecture and history. Houses were close together with a variety of colored doors. Most houses had a couple steps up to the walk, and on the steps we often rested. Houses displayed pictures of the pope in the windows and, of course, the Irish flag of green, yellow and white was shown everywhere.

It was not our plan to go to Phoenix Park, but we did want to see the Book of Kells at Trinity College and do some shopping for linen and sweaters. We found Trinity College closed and then went to the area of neat shops, where I

Madison expands hearings, names officer

By Scott Cousins
Staff writer

The city of Madison has expanded its administrative hearing system and hired a new hearing officer.

The system — in force since the fall — allows the city to handle ordinance violations outside the normal court system. Previously, the hearing system dealt only with nonmoving vehicle violations, building code or health violations.

At Tuesday's meeting, the council approved an ordinance expanding the program to include a number of other offenses. Those include parking, animal violations, vehicle stickers, inoperable or abandoned vehicles, graffiti, recycling violations, shoplifting, public indecency, soliciting for prostitution, vehicle equipment violations, curfew, parental responsibility, occupancy, and some alcohol offenses.

The council also approved hiring attorney Jack Daugherty as the city's hearing officer.

Mayor John Hamm said hiring a new hearing officer was necessary because state statutes required the officer to be an attorney for some types of cases.

Since the system started in September, John Greco has served as hearing officer. Hamm said he might still serve when necessary, but would be unable to hear some kinds of cases.

Since Madison started its hearing system, several other local communities — including Granite City — have started planning similar systems.

In a related matter, the council approved sending Daugherty to school in Chicago for the program at a cost of $400 plus expenses.

The council also approved paying attorneys fees of $3,500 for negotiations between the city and Gateway National Golf Links over the incorporation and redevelopment agreement of the property in the city's tax increment financing district.

As part of negotiations between the city and golf course developer Tim Crowley, the city agreed to pay part of Crowley's legal fees.

In a letter to Hamm, Crowley had requested payment of $5,201.35, but that was negotiated down to $3,500.

In the letter, Crowley said the legal fees were more than twice what he expected because of the length of negotiations.

City Attorney Casper Nighohossian said part of the reason for that was that Crowley had wanted the city to issue bonds that the city was not willing to issue at the time.

In a related matter, the city also approved allowing Hamm to sign a $500 contract with Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville to perform a preliminary archaeological survey for the forced-main sewer near Gateway International Raceway and the golf course.

As part of negotiations with the racetrack, the city agreed to install the sewer, which Hamm said needs to be in place by the end of the year.

The city must also secure easements from the racetrack, golf course and the Metro East Sanitary District.

GCHS schedules financial aid workshop for seniors

Juniors and seniors at Granite City High School who are considering needs-based financial aid can get information or begin filling out paperwork at a workshop in February.

A financial aid workshop will be held in the GCHS Media Center at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 3.

Information on Illinois Student Assistance Commission Financial Aid Programs, grant programs, scholarship programs, and loan programs will be among items discussed, and Free Applications for Federal Student Aid will be available.

That aid can come in the form of grants, work-study programs, or low-interest loans.

"We're going to go through this whole process of filing the federal forms," Thomas said. "It's a lot to understand, and a lot of information comes across in an hour." Sally Mullen of the Financial Aid Office at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville will give an overview of the ISAC and FAFSA programs.

Although geared toward juniors and seniors, Thomas said parent of freshmen and sophomores are welcome.

Illinois State Police stay on alert during visit

By Nicole Vaughn
Staff writer

Pope John Paul II's St. Louis visit didn't include any Metro-East stops, but Illinois State Police were taking no chances.

A classroom at the Illinois State office complex in Collinsville's Eastport Plaza was transformed into a temporary command center.

The room was manned by more than a dozen officers representing groups that included state police, state Department of Transportation, state Emergency Management Agency and the St. Clair County Sheriff's Department.

"Everything is pretty quiet right now and we're working to keep it that way," ISP District 11 Commander Chuck Brueggemann said Tuesday.

Internet connections with five Missouri State Police command posts, staff monitoring television news coverage and radio transmissions helped the ISP center track the pope from his arrival Tuesday to his departure Wednesday.

Troopers lined various spots of Interstates 255 and 55/70 anticipating a multitude of traffic problems.

In addition to a full District 11 staff — there were no days off or vacation time allowed Tuesday or Wednesday — Brueggemann said nearly 70 other troopers were brought in from around the state.

Trooper Ralph Timmins said that for Wednesday, when the pope's Mass was scheduled at the Trans World Dome, he was expecting quite a crowd. While people jammed downtown St. Louis before and during the Mass, there were no major tie-ups or other problems, Timmins said.

Timmins said the extra troopers were needed to enforce an 11-mile tow zone from Illinois leading into Missouri. Between Tuesday and Wednesday, 15 vehicles were towed from the zone.

He has seen people do some silly things when there are big events in St. Louis, he said.

Collinsville council approves downtown MCT center

By Val McDowell
Staff writer

Collinsville may soon have a new transit station at Clay and Clinton in the heart of its downtown.

At its meeting Monday, the Collinsville City Council voted unanimously to send a letter to the Madison County Transit District stating it would not oppose a plan for a transfer center at that location.

Mayor Vince Kutza said the letter will repeat the city's desire to have the station at a different site. But the council will cooperate with MCT and not oppose MCT's proposal.

The move follows a presentation by Jerry Kane, MCT managing director, at a public forum last week which outlined benefits to the city of having a transit station at the Clinton and Clay site.

Kutza said he felt residents favored the site. "I have talked to a lot of people after the meeting, and basically, I'm willing to withdraw my original objections," Kutza said.

Kane had said previously that MCT needed a response from the council by the end of January or it would look at sites in other communities. Kane said the Clay and Clinton site was the only one in Collinsville that would satisfy its requirements.

He said the council's change of heart was a positive development.

"I think this is good for Collinsville and good for Madison County Transit," Kane said.

Kane said the Transit Board would meet today (Thursday) and discuss the future of that location.

Kane said once the project received approval from the MCT board, it should take less than a year to complete. Some councilman said they agreed to sign the letter as a compromise.

Councilman Fred Dalton said he preferred the location to be used for commercial activity, but would accept MCT's recommendation.

"Jerry Kane can put it (the transit site) where ever he wants, to," he said. "I wouldn't have any grounds to opposing this site, other than not liking it."

Councilman Don Koonce also said he believed the site could better serve commercial development.

"I think if we put it here, we would be removing a very valuable piece of property from our downtown tax base," Koonce said.

Koonce also said he had questions about the district's plans,

"Jerry Kane can put it wherever he wants. I wouldn't have any grounds to opposing this site, other than not liking it."

Fred Dalton
Collinsville City Council member

including a detailed description of the building's size, as well as its cost and projected maintenance plans.

"I think it's unfortunate that Mr. Kane never had the opportunity to come before the council and answer these questions directly," Koonce said.

Koonce was among council members who favored making Kane's presentation part of a council workshop meeting. Last week's forum was arranged by the Collinsville Chamber of Commerce. While the full council attended, they were not able to discuss the proposal during the forum without violating the Open Meetings Act.

Monday, Feb. 8. At the high school, a total of 24½ minutes will be added to the daily schedule. Middle schools will have about 28 minutes added and elementary schools will have 21 minutes added.

At Granite City High School, classes will begin at 7:45 a.m. and end at 3:15 p.m.

Coolidge Middle School classes will begin at 7:45 a.m. and end at 3:22 p.m., while Grigsby Middle School will begin at 8:05 a.m. and end at 3:48 p.m. Maryville Elementary School will begin at 8:05 a.m. and end at 2:26 p.m., while all other elementary schools will begin at 8:20 a.m. and end at 2:56 p.m.

Superintendent Steve Balen said they wanted to avoid extending the school year into the summer for several reasons, including attendance and heat-related problems.

"Our theory is that you can avoid excesses of heat," he said. "We feel that instruction for kids is more effective in February, March, April and May than June."

He also said extending the year would probably have a negative impact on attendance. Figures show that absentee rates would jump from about 1 percent to about 3.7 percent.

Part of that is due to parents who have already made vacation plans and children getting "anxious" when the weather starts to warm up.

A financial analysis of the plan showed that extending the school day would save about $35,404.

event that varied from thoughtful lecture to rock concert.

The day began for many of the teens about 9 a.m. with a youth walk from the grounds of the Gateway Arch down Market Street to the Kiel Center. Fran Wagner, who led a delegation of seven youngsters and two adults from Holy Family Parish House in Cahokia, Ill., said his group had no trouble getting to the event on MetroLink, but it was a little cold waiting outside the arena.

Even before the events inside the Kiel Center began, Rich Matt, 16, of Cahokia, said he believed the day would leave a lasting impression on those who attended.

"It's definitely something we'll remember for a long time," Matt said.

One St. Charles man who attended the event said he felt the event had strengthened his faith.

"Even if you're not religious, it's a historical event," said Adrian York, 22, a parishioner at St. Charles Borromeo Catholic Church.

York's younger brother, Colin, 20, said the enthusiasm generated by the pope's visit could be felt all day.

"There's a lot of energy in this place," Colin York said. "It just can't wait to hear what it's like when he actually walks in."

Speakers both in the Kiel Center and the Papal Plaza

included Madeline Manning Mims, a four-time Olympian in track and field who is now a speaker and gospel recording artist, and Father Stan Fortuna, a Franciscan friar from the Bronx who finished his speech by rapping about love and faith.

The Supertones, a Christian ska-band from Orange County, Calif., had the teens dancing in the aisles and bouncing up and down to the beat of the music. There seemed to be many teens milling around the concert of the Kiel Center throughout the day, but they all appeared to be back in their seats for the performance of popular Christian-rock band dc Talk, which had not only the teens, but nuns, friars and even the bishops of the Archdiocese standing and clapping along.

There were standing ovations and camera flashes when the scoreboard and projection-screen monitors showed the pope's plane touching down at Lambert-St. Louis International Airport, when he emerged from the plane, and when his motorcade was shown moving through the Central West End on its way to the Kiel Center.

The crowd roared when the monitors showed the pope greeting a Cardinal of another kind, baseball slugger Mark McGwire, inside the Kiel Center.

The pope entered the arena to a shower of flash bulbs, and cheers of "John Paul II, we love you."

The pope said the Kiel Center had become a training ground for the young people, just as it had been for athletes who play hockey, soccer, and basketball, and strayed from his written statement by adding, "It says nothing here about football."

The pope urged young people to be strong in their faith, especially at a time when morality is losing its importance.

"Do not listen to those who encourage you to lie, to shirk responsibility, to put yourselves first," the pope said. "Do not listen to those who tell you that chastity is passe."

The pope closed his prayer service address by reminding the youth of their importance to the Catholic Church.

"Remember, Christ is calling you, the Church needs you, and he expects great things from you," the pope said.

Before leaving the arena, the pope was presented with a miter, a hat made by the Sisters of the Most Precious Blood in O'Fallon as a gift. The sisters also made an embroidered red stole, which was worn by the pope during the service.

The pope received a hockey stick and a St. Louis Blues jersey with the number 1 and "John Paul II" on the back.

"So I am prepared to return once more to play hockey," the pope said.

A fireworks display entertained the crowd as it slowly filed out of the Kiel Center.

drooled at all the items in the windows. The stores were closed so we realized that our shopping would have to be done the next day at the Dublin Airport before we flew to Scotland.

The next day I did find my Aran sweater, but little in inns. In the afternoon of the pope's trip we did find out that there was to be a parade. We decided to stay in the city to see the pope. We knew that the ads called the Gresham Hotel the premier hotel in Dublin, so we went out to find it. We spent a couple hours relaxing on the lobby sofas. All lobbies in the British Isles, the lobby tables in front of the sofas, and waiters and waitresses keep an eye on the sofa occupants from the bar and dining room in order to serve drinks, tea and scones. The pope was to pass by at 5:30 p.m., and there were two delays announced. I floated in tea and Milt in tea and beer, and restrooms were on the mezzanine. We took a little break to walk a block down the street and found military on guard below the curb every six feet: a sailor and then a soldier. As we walked past them I said to my husband, "Aren't they so young and cute?" They couldn't have heard me, but as I looked past, a sailor winked at me.

We went back and ordered some more tea until finally someone announced, "He's coming." We hustled out to the curb and the parade came after bus of cardinals and other dignitaries. Then came the pope. I was right on the curb with no one in front of me and as the pope passed slowly he looked in to my eyes and smiled. I was just six to eight feet away. We considered this quite a thrill, even if we are Protestant.

After the parade we went back to our hotel by bus, tired but excited.

In a magazine, Cardinal Thomas O'Finch said, "For three days the Irish people rejoiced as never before. There is no heart beating in an Irish breast which did not feel its pulse quickened by the presence of John Paul II, our Holy Father." The pope bid Ireland goodbye with this sentence, "May God and Mary be with you and with the families of Ireland, always!"

Yes, we Presbyterians enjoyed seeing the pope and joining in the festivities, but we were surprised when seven weeks later we received a call from Ireland wondering where our rented car was! We supposed the person who took our call was too excited to write down our message and his reply.

Media shines on St. Louis

By Michael Penrod
Staff writer

The constant clicking of camera shutters filled the air as Shepherd I. Pope John Paul II's customized Boeing 777, taxied to a stop at Lambert Airport Tuesday afternoon.

With the chirping clamor of a journalistic beehive, dozens of photographers and television news crews from around the world pushed their way into position to capture just one glimpse of the leader of the Roman Catholic faith.

Kept in check by only a waist high steel gate and several well-armed security officers, these professional newsgatherers did all they could to capture the best shot of the pope for the millions of television viewers and newspaper readers whose eyes were focused on St. Louis.

Since the earliest days of Pope John Paul II's career as pontiff, his visits to foreign cities have often spurred a media frenzy, but few reporters and observers of the papal office could recall a larger media reaction to a papal visit than his stay here in St. Louis.

Charles Lewis, correspondent for Eternal Word Television Network out of Birmingham, Ala., has covered two other papal visits to the United States. He said this particular papal visit is the largest he's seen.

Lewis said what made this papal visit so important is simply because of the pope's appeal to citizens of the world, regardless of their religious beliefs.

"I think it is always a monumentous experience in terms of coverage, but this one might be a little heightened because of the growing of his stature in the world, not only in the Catholic community, but also in the world in general," Lewis said.

He said the fact that the world was watching St. Louis while the pope was in town is an indication of Pope John Paul II's growing influence among Catholics and non-Catholics.

"He's really a world leader in addition to being the leader of one billion Roman Catholics," Lewis said. "He's really earned a position in the world."

Lewis said part of the pontiff's appeal stems from the nature of his message. He said Pope John Paul II speaks to the whole world, not just to the world's Catholics.

He added that the pope's message puts him in a position of great respect among many people throughout the world.

"Because of his personal integrity, his personal holiness, his words carry a great weight," Lewis said. "Besides the nature of his message, he is also a brilliant philosopher. He has a lot to say."

Fairmount City police recover gun from robbery

By Nicole Vaughn
Staff writer

Last week's melting snow revealed more than the ground beneath it to Fairmount City police.

For three weeks the snow and ice had blanketed a handgun used to shoot two car lot employees during a robbery. Shortly before 10 a.m. last Thursday, Illinois State Police, Fairmount City police officers and a group of civilian volunteers began combing the area where the gun had been thrown.

About 40 minutes later, police department custodian Paul Garcia alerted authorities he had located the weapon.

Police say the blue steel, snub-nosed revolver was used in the Dec. 31 robbery of D&D Motors, 2902 Kingshighway.

During the robbery, two employees — a 24-year-old female and a 35-year-old male — were each shot twice. Both victims are Belleville residents.

Fairmount City Police Chief Scott Penny said the gun, discarded by two suspects during a high-speed chase along Interstate 55, solidified the case. The chase ended near Staunton when slick roads forced the car the duo had stolen from the female employee off the road. It lost a wheel and went into a field.

The precipitation that sent the car out of control was the beginning of a major winter storm that first brought ice and then several inches of snow.

"It was the only thing that remained to close this case," Penny said. "It was the last piece of evidence needed."

One of the suspects allegedly threw the gun from the car as they sped north on Interstate 55 after being spotted by and ISP trooper near Troy.

John W. Pickens, 38, and Byron S. Madison, 39, both of East St. Louis, were each charged with two counts of aggravated battery and armed robbery.

The two, who previously had been on parole, were being held in the St. Clair County Jail in lieu of $1 million bail each.

Both victims have been released from the hospital. The woman, who was shot in the back and the head, has regained her vision and her ability to speak, Penny said. The man, who was shot in the stomach and the neck, is doing equally well.

"There have been remarkable recoveries by both," Penny said. "She was shot behind the left ear and a lot of times people don't even survive that. She is up walking around."

Two GCHS students expelled

By Scott Cousins
Staff writer

A Granite City High School student who allegedly called in a bomb threat to the school earlier this month — and possibly on one or more occasions earlier in the school year — was expelled Tuesday.

Superintendent Steve Balen did not name the student, but Bynon James Dunn, 18, who gave police a Collinsville address but was listed as a Granite City resident by the district, was charged Jan. 12 with one count of false report of a bomb alarm, a Class 4 felony. He was released after posting bond.

According to police, at about 12:10 p.m. Jan. 11, a school secretary was a telephone call from someone saying there was a bomb in a locker at the school.

The report noted that the call came during a break in the classes, and the secretary said the voice sounded similar to someone who had placed made similar threats twice this school year.

The school was not evacuated at that time, but was evacuated after a similar threat in September.

Through a combination of tracing the call and an administrator overhearing students talking about the threat, they were able to trace the call to Dunn.

In an unrelated matter, another unidentified student was expelled for being under the influence of drugs. The student admitted smoking marijuana after he came to school and a hall monitor noticed the smell on the student's clothes.

THE LAW AND YOU

By RICK REED
Attorney At Law

In many cases when an employee is injured on the job, the question arises as to whether the injury "arose out of" his employment. The term "arising out of" refers to the causal connection between the employment and the injury. To establish this connection, the injured employee will need to establish that the origin of his injury lies in some risk related to the employment.

In one recent case, a man worked for the Springfield school district as a security guard. In this position, he was responsible for maintaining security at an elementary school, three mobile classrooms, and a service center all sitting on the same property. His duties included checking doors and windows and looking for unsafe conditions.

On April 8, 1994, while making his rounds in the early morning, a dog attacked the claimant and grabbed his pant cuff. The employee kicked the dog as hard as he could and immediately felt pain shooting up his left leg into his spine.

Eventually the employee was diagnosed with chronic low back pain, and he was referred to a neurosurgeon. The neurosurgeon recommended continued therapy and exercise. The issue in this case was whether there was a causal connection between the claimant's employment and his injury. The employer felt that the injured employee would have to demonstrate that he had an increased risk of an attack by a stray dog over and above the risk to the general population of Springfield.

The Appellate Court found that the claimant was entitled to benefits in this case. The court noted that while it was true that the location to which the claimant was assigned had not experienced problems before with stray dogs, other school grounds within the district had. More importantly, the claimant was at a location when and where the general public would not and should not be located. The incident occurred at 4:40 in the morning on school grounds at a time when the employee was to protect the property against intruders. The claimant's confrontation with the dog occurred while he was in the performance of his watch duties and his injuries accordingly resulted from protecting the school grounds. For all of these reasons, the Appellate Court determined that the injured employee's injury did "arise out of" his employment, and therefore he was entitled to benefits under the Worker's Compensation Act.

State taxpayers can file returns through Internet

Illinois taxpayers will be able to file their state income tax returns via the Internet. The department has added Internet filing, on a pilot basis, to its state of electronic filing options for the 1998 filing season.

Internet filing, available to 700,000 randomly selected taxpayers who received a special message on the cover of their 1040 booklets and can file by coming to a special Internet site.

TeleFile, available to 500,000 taxpayers who received an insert in their state tax booklets and can file by making a 10-minute, toll-free telephone call.

Direct Electronic Filing, available to 4.8 million taxpayers who meet qualifications spelled out in their state tax booklets and can file their tax returns by going to a tax practitioner registered with the department.

The first electronically filed returns came with the introduction of the Direct Electronic Filing program that saw 813 participants in 1991. TeleFile was added for the 1994 filing season. The two programs together totaled 615,000 returns during the 1998 filing season.

Taxpayers eligible for Internet filing will find a special message printed on the front of their IL-1040 booklets and a unique personal identification number printed inside the booklet.

Those eligible for TeleFile have a special four-page insert in their tax booklets.

Only taxpayers who are pre-selected for Internet filing and TeleFile are eligible to participate in those programs.

The Internet filing program has no cost to taxpayers and avoids the phone costs the department has experienced with TeleFile.

The current program is a limited pilot designed to test public acceptance and technical capabilities that will be expanded in the future.

All electronic filing programs offer taxpayers confirmation of filing, reductions in errors and quicker refunds by eliminating data entry from paper forms.

Police report battery cases

By Scott Cousins
Staff writer

Two battery cases were reported by Venice police Tuesday evening and early Wednesday morning.

In one, an Edwardsville man was charged after an altercation with police. In the other case, a Centerville woman was injured when she was struck by an unknown assailant in front of Cut Rate Lounge on Baucum Avenue.

Lennell L. Johnson, 32, of Edwardsville, was charged with battery, assault, disorderly conduct, having no valid registration and blocking the roadway.

A charge of criminal damage to property was added after he apparently slammed his fist the door of the police station entrance, cracking the window.

According to reports, at about 7:40 p.m. Tuesday, an officer observed a brown Mercedes-Benz stopped in the middle of the 1000 block of Third Street with the engine running.

The officer attempted to find the owner, but was unsuccessful, so he called for a tow truck. About 14 minutes after that Johnson showed up.

As the officer was writing a ticket, the tow truck arrived and Johnson allegedly became enraged and was cursing and threatening the officer.

He was placed under arrest and taken to the Police Department, where he accused the officer of pulling a gun on him in the cell.

Another prisoner there at the time was questioned about the alleged incident and said it didn't happen.

Johnson was bailed out, but on his way out, allegedly hit the door window, cracking it. A criminal damage charge was added after that.

In the second incident, a Centerville woman was charged with battery, assault, disorderly conduct, having no valid registration and blocking the roadway.

The woman was taken to St. Elizabeth Medical Center for treatment, where she told police she wanted care of her alleged assailant.

SIUE hosting math regional

Some 400 students from 18 schools will compete at the regional level of the Illinois High School Mathematics Contest to be conducted at Southern Illinois University Edwardsville on Saturday, Feb. 27, said coordinator Paul Phillips, professor of mathematics and statistics at SIUE.

Regionals will be conducted the same day throughout the state. Organized by the Illinois Council of Teachers of Mathematics with financial support from CNA Insurance Companies, the event will involve some 250 schools at 21 regional sites.

Winners of the SIUE regional will advance to the state finals at Illinois State University in Normal on April 27. The contest is open to students in grades nine through 12. There are six events in a regional, ranging from oral competition to calculator and team competition. Skills to be tested include factoring, logarithms, inequalities, logical reasoning, and creative analysis used in algebra through calculus. Scoring will be based on accuracy.

Strange times: Hoops rivalry becomes an ugly situation

Maybe it's the weather. Maybe it's the times. Strange and sad is the way one could describe the heated boys basketball rivalry between Mount Vernon and Centralia. A few "fans" reportedly have spoiled things for the vast majority of supporters for each of the teams.

There is talk of taking some drastic measures if things don't calm down when the two schools meet on the court. Those measures include not playing each other during the regular season, as each home team would take a forfeit in their two scheduled South Seven Conference games.

Another proposal is not having any fans at the games. And a third is that Mount Vernon would drop out of the Centralia Tournament and Centralia would drop out of the Salem Tournament, thus avoiding a possible meeting in those tournaments in which both are presently entered.

Problems between the two schools include fights, vandalism, players being threatened and pushed, and security called in to escort a visiting team to its bus.

It's a shame high school sports has come to this. In the history of Metro East prep sports, there have been similar situations. Obviously, there is no place for the behavior in high school or any level of sports competition.

To the credit of the administrators at Mount Vernon and Centralia, they are taking the situation seriously. No one has been physically hurt — yet — but they believe there is the potential for that to happen.

Centralia plays at Mount Vernon on Feb. 5 and Mount Vernon plays at Centralia on Feb. 20. Extra police and security will be on hand to make sure things don't get started. Unfortunately, the situation between the two schools has taken the glitter away from a remarkable unbeaten season and No. 2 state ranking in Class AA for Mount Vernon.

On a more positive note, it was strange for Kyle Rainwater to pour in 48 points for Triad in its overtime victory against Freeburg. There was no way of knowing the spirited guard would come up only one point short of the school record.

Rainwater came in averaging less than 20 points per game, so the 46-point outburst was a surprise. His scoring output is a credit to his competitiveness. Be it soccer — in which he was an all-stater — or basketball, Rainwater gives his all. He succeeds because he will it.

Rainwater epitomizes what is good about high school sports. While not blessed with great size, Rainwater gets the job done because of his tenacity and desire to win.

The college basketball scene also has taken on a strange aura this season. How can Southern Illinois University-Edwardsville beat the No. 1-ranked team in NCAA Division II, Kentucky Wesleyan, while struggling to find the .500 mark?

Another struggling team, Saint Louis University, somehow mustered enough moxie to knock off perennial powerhouse Kansas. The Billikens also scored a big win against the University of North Carolina-Charlotte, the only team to beat Cincinnati this season.

And then there was Missouri's stunning victory against Kansas on the road Sunday. That came on the heels of reported dissension on the Missouri team, especially from Tigers freshman guard Keyon Dooling after Missouri was blasted by Colorado.

So, what did Dooling do against Kansas? His play was a big reason why the Tigers were able to post the upset.

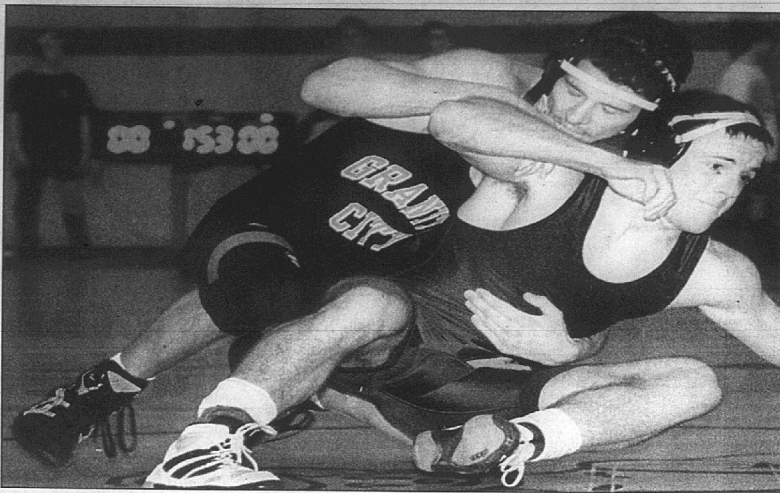

It didn't figure but that's what makes sports interesting.

SWC steps into high gear

The Southwestern Conference boys basketball steps back into full swing this weekend with six games in two days.

Senior demonstrates persistence on the mat

Wrestling is a cut-throat sport — not much room for congeniality, no pauses for breath. Just all-out physical mano y mano.

Imagine diving into that battle without being able to hear anything going on around you. That is the situation for Granite City senior Dennis Davis every match.

Davis transferred to Granite City after his freshman year at the Illinois School for the Deaf in Jacksonville. He wanted to become part of the championship tradition of Granite City wrestling.

"I started wrestling at ISD when I was in fifth grade," Davis said through his interpreter, Ronda Anderson. "I wrestled at ISD for five years."

Svezia likes to do dirty work for Warriors

By Rick Broome
Staff writer

David Svezia has many things in abundance — speed, moxie, enthusiasm, tenacity. The assistant captain for the Illinois Warriors is frequently at the center of any storm that swirls around his team. He isn't afraid to do the menial work that every winning team needs to get done.

"I just try to get in there and do all the dirty work," Svezia said. "I try to set up my linemates for goals. I'm not the most talented player, but

CLUB ICE HOCKEY

I've got enough to get me through, so I just try to work hard to make up for the talents that I don't have.

"I just try and make sure everybody has high spirits and nobody gets down. My job really is to keep everybody loose in tense situations and lead by example. If the guys see me slacking, then they might start slacking so I just try to keep working all the time."

"David is Charlie Hustle," Granite

City coach Paul Sollberger said. "He gives me 100 percent every shift. He doesn't score a lot of goals, but he seems to score timely ones. He is one of the fastest skaters on the team. He is an excellent defensive player, an excellent backchecker."

In what was perhaps his best game of the year, Svezia was assigned a difficult task: shadow Edwardsville's Carl Coleman, one of the best offensive players in the Mississippi Valley Club Hockey Association, and shut him down. He did that and more.

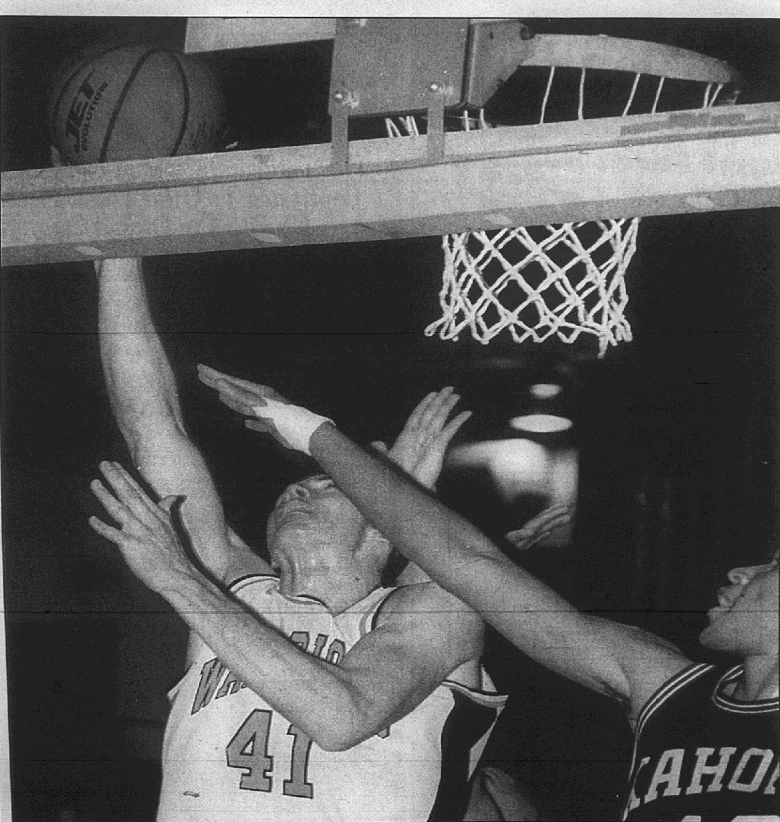

"What I normally try to do is get their minds off of their game first," Svezia said. "I'll talk to them, say little stuff, and then I'll just make sure that they never get the puck and I'll just go wherever they go. I've been shadowing for a long time, so that's always seemed to be my job. If there was a big player, that would always put me out there so I had some experience going into it."

"In that game in particular, I pushed him offside a couple of times which helped us a lot. We were going around at the end of the game and there was an opportunity and I took

Granite City drops two straight at Salem

Chris Tindall and his Granite City teammates must shake off two losses before conference games this weekend with Edwardsville and Alton.

Warriors fall to Edwardsville, Effingham in Salem tourney

The Salem Tournament ended in disappointing fashion last weekend for the Granite City boys basketball team.

BOYS BASKETBALL

After a victory Thursday against Charleston in the opening round, Granite City fell 61-45 in the semifinals and then lost 45-39 to Effingham in the third-place game.

Edwardsville avenged a one-point loss to the Tigers from earlier this season.

"We had a second quarter where we scored only one field goal, a 3-pointer by Kevin Elliott," Granite City coach John VanBuskirk said. "In the first half, we were 5-for-22. For the game we only shot 34 percent, so again it's the same exact story — where you shoot that low of a percentage and you can't beat a team. That's the name of that song."

"In the third quarter they got ahead 43-28, and in the fourth quarter they spread the floor and made us play them man-to-man, which they are very good at. That's playing their kind of ballgame, so they win that one just by doing that. They are very good at spreading the floor and making you let them shoot free throws."

Edwardsville made 25 of 36 shots — shooting almost 66 percent from the field.

Lytle had 19 for the game. "You can complain that maybe we gave them too easy of shots or our defense wasn't good enough, yet Turner made four 3-pointers," VanBuskirk said. "They were 5 for 9 nine from the 3-point line at a crucial time, in that second and third quarters. That really hurt us. Lytle had 13 points at the half, and we had 13, so he had as many points by himself at the half as we did as a team. It was just our shooting. Kevin made the 3 at about the four-minute mark and I thought, 'All right, now we're done with that drought, let's go now,' and it never came."

Granite City lost the game to Effingham after being ahead most of the way.

"We had the lead most of the

Kahoks prove point to Tigers

By Brian Bretsch
Staff writer

The people seeding the girls basketball teams for the IHSA Class AA Taylorville Sectional knew something.

They picked Collinsville as the No. 4 seed and gave Edwardsville the No. 6 seed, despite the Tigers' victory against the Kahoks on Dec. 14.

But Collinsville (15-6) proved the seedings right by topping the Tigers 37-24 on Tuesday night in Collinsville.

Collinsville senior Autumn Dow and junior Amy Loftus combined to score 22 points.

The victory was the seventh straight for the Kahoks, who improved to 6-2 in the Southwestern Conference. The Tigers fell to 12-6 overall.

"I thought there were three keys tonight," Collinsville coach Steve McFall said. "The way Loftus played was a big key. I thought the defense was key and then I thought the perimeter shooting was key."

"We hit three or four huge (3-point) shots at times we needed to hit them and that made them come out and play a little more defense on us."

Edwardsville led just 6-4 after the first quarter as a defensive battle was in the works.

The game remained tight as the score was tied five times in the second quarter. Collinsville's Stacy Deluca drained a 3-pointer in the Kahoks their biggest first-half lead, 18-15.

The Tigers rushed the ball to halfcourt for a final shot — which banked in off the glass — but the referees ruled the shot was taken after the buzzer.

Collinsville was never headed after a stretch in the third quarter when it hit three straight 3-pointers — one by Angie Parker and two by Rachel Stabenfeldt. Parker's 3-pointer and 3:55 remaining pushed the Kahoks lead to 27-19.

Rachel Ferree scored for Edwardsville to trim the lead to 27-21, but the Tigers were scoreless the rest of the period and put up just three more in the final period.

Meanwhile, Collinsville stretched its lead to 31-21 by the end of the third period on a basket by Deluca and two free throws by Loftus.

McFall was surprised Edwardsville did not try to increase the tempo.

"I thought maybe they would," McFall said. "We've seen their press and they pressed us the last time. It wasn't real against us. (Point guard) Rachel Stabenfeldt is the real deal. She is a sophomore, but she is the real stuff."

We've seen (Edwardsville's) Lindsay Anderson put big-time pressure on people. I thought she came out and exerted pressure but I thought Stabenfeldt handled it well and we got into the offense every time."

"I think I had a lot to do with that. That's what we've been trying to preach all year — not trying to be John Wayne and just whenever somebody punches you, just turn the other cheek and laugh in their face, because we have the victory in hand. There is nothing

it away from him and he just turned around and punched me in the face. He got a game misconduct and the next game they tied a team that they should have beat, so I like to think I had a lot to do with that. That's what we've been trying to preach all year — not trying to be John Wayne and just whenever somebody punches you, just turn the other cheek and laugh in their face, because we have the victory in hand. There is nothing to be gained from hitting them back."

Sollberger was impressed with Svezia's performance. "He held Coleman to one shot, which is saying something," Sollberger said. "That was the first time we ever shadowed anybody. David is tenacious, the kind of kid when he is out there and he is dogging them that can get under their skin."

"David did his job and that's a difficult job to do — to shadow somebody, have no regard for scoring. His job was strictly defense and he did an excellent job of it."

Svezia has plenty of versatility, even playing in goal occasionally for the junior varsity team. It has contributed to his overall game.

"I started playing hockey when I was five," Svezia said. "For a couple of years I played goalie, but I've been pretty much skating since I was five. Right now, with me playing goalie, I concentrate on my edges a lot more so I can keep my balance. That has really carried over, because now I can use both of my edges all of the time and I'm always prepared to do whatever it takes."

Svezia is going to be a key component in any run the Warriors make down the stretch toward a second consecutive MVCHA title.

"Right now, we are playing really good hockey," Svezia said. "The last four or five games, we have been playing hard. We just have to keep this up. Scotty (Bronnauer) has been playing well back in goal."

When you only give up 45 points, you should be able to win in high school."

The Warriors shot only 11 for 31 from the field, but point guard Zack May took more than two-thirds (22) of the shots and had more than half the team's points (20).

Zack is the one who tried to get us out of it," VanBuskirk said. "He gave everything he didn't, but he was the one that was getting open and taking the shots. Zack made the first-team all-tournament team, and deservedly so."

The Warriors had trouble wiping the glass.

"They had a 6-foot-9 kid inside that was a good player, that caused us problems," VanBuskirk said. "It wasn't like you could just go inside and score. It was the same kind of deal as with Lytle."

"And 31 is not enough shots. We had way too many turnovers, we had 12 turnovers."

"I counted in the fourth quarter, when we were still ahead, and we shot two air balls and had two turnovers in four possessions. In the fourth quarter that can't happen."

The Warriors are mindful of last year's 10-game slide at the end of the season, which began at this point in the season — and wary of making any mistakes that could lead to a repeat performance.

"They fought it last year to a certain point," VanBuskirk said. "We are going to work real hard so that that doesn't happen again. They have been good enough, maybe we can get over it."

before I came here. I like to work hard to keep fit and keep myself strong."

As a freshman at ISD, I heard about Granite City and how tough it was and how they were always champions. Then as a sophomore, I came here and the practices were very hard for me, very tough. But I have been here for three years and love it."

Davis' record this season is 18-16, including 10 wins by fall and two by major decisions.

"He has the disability but we try not to use that as a hindrance or a crutch for him or us," Granite City coach Mike Garland said. "We try to treat him equal and I think he would tell you that. We have an interpreter, Ronda Anderson, there who interprets for us and him."

"For a couple of years, we've kind of learned to adapt to us as he has learned to adapt to us. I think it's a good working situation. I think it's a great motivating factor for the other kids to see a kid wrestling with that kind of a disability and still function in wrestling and still have a winning record with our schedule."

It's really saying something for Dennis. The kids see that. It doesn't matter if he is deaf or speaking, but as long as he has an interpreter it helps, and the interpreter goes with him all the time, for three years."

Davis serves as an inspiration to the rest of the team when he gets tough in the practice."

"We had a kid from Brazil, had never wrestled a day in his life," Garland recalled. "He came out here and just got absolutely beat on every day for a year, but he stuck with it. So every time those kids would look down and complain to us, they would look at him and think, well at least every now and then we're on top, he's never on top, he's always getting beat."

"It's the same thing with Dennis. He's still hanging in there, he's still wrestling, he's a part of our team."

Davis doesn't want to be treated special. "I don't want the full brunt of the hardcore training."

"We don't give him any special concessions as an excuse we want him to feel like, 'Hey, you're part of this team because of what you have done and what you are, not because of your handicap,'" Garland said. "Your handicap has nothing to do with where you are, has nothing to do with our expectations of you."

On the mats, Davis is as resilient as any wrestler in the Metro East.

"I try to just keep going and keep fighting," Davis said. "I get that from the practices. They are so tough and so long. They make me very tired... I would like to be going better and winning more."

Everything about Davis' situation is not the same, though. "All the other boys have coaching from the corner of the mat," Anderson said. "But he doesn't get that coaching. He's on his own. I know that makes it a lot harder for him. I don't know if he realizes it, but it does. They can coach the other kids from the corner, and we can't coach him. So he has to look at us and watch us the whole time he is wrestling. When the ref takes a situation, I have to look at the coach. Sometimes the ref doesn't understand and they will try to stop him. Normally, they touch him on the back or the leg to let him know, but sometimes they forget. Most make us to stop him, but sometimes he gets confused by the ref."

Davis has gotten a lot out of his time in the program.

"It has shown me a lot of wrestling techniques and I have learned a lot as a wrestler," Davis said. "I've learned a lot of different moves and ways to wrestle. I've learned to always do my best and keep going and keep trying and not to give up, not to stop."

Most make us to stop him, but sometimes he gets confused by the ref."

"His record is what it is because of our schedule. If he wrestled in the regular season, he might have 25 or 30 wins but hopefully all of this will make him a better wrestler come regional and sectional time. He placed in the (Granite City's William Red) Schmitt Holiday Tournament, he placed in the Geneseo Tournament, which means that he's seen a steady improvement. If he continues to wrestle like we want him to, which he has the last three weeks, you can see the big difference."

game, but we only scored 39 points, so that tells you something about our game," VanBuskirk said. "When you only give up 45 points, you should be able to win in high school."

The Warriors shot only 11 for 31 from the field, but point guard Zack May took more than two-thirds (22) of the shots and had more than half the team's points (20).

Zack is the one who tried to get us out of it," VanBuskirk said. "He gave everything he didn't, but he was the one that was getting open and taking the shots. Zack made the first-team all-tournament team, and deservedly so."

The Warriors had trouble wiping the glass.

"They had a 6-foot-9 kid inside that was a good player, that caused us problems," VanBuskirk said. "It wasn't like you could just go inside and score. It was the same kind of deal as with Lytle."

"And 31 is not enough shots. We had way too many turnovers, we had 12 turnovers."

"I counted in the fourth quarter, when we were still ahead, and we shot two air balls and had two turnovers in four possessions. In the fourth quarter that can't happen."

The Warriors are mindful of last year's 10-game slide at the end of the season, which began at this point in the season — and wary of making any mistakes that could lead to a repeat performance.

"They fought it last year to a certain point," VanBuskirk said. "We are going to work real hard so that that doesn't happen again. They have been good enough, maybe we can get over it."

They were playing a good man-to-man, but it wasn't a pressing man-to-man like Edwardsville, they pressed us the whole first time — constant pressure at all the time — and we had six turnovers. Approved mechanics assure you of much competence

The task of finding a competent auto technician is becoming a bit easier, thanks to the National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence, a non-profit group that tests and certifies the technical competence of individual automotive technicians.

With more than 350,000 currently certified technicians on its rosters, ASE is the only automotive certification group that is both national in scope and industry-wide. ASE-certified technicians can be found at every type of repair facility, from dealerships to independent garages.

ASE spells good news for consumers.

Prior to taking ASE certification tests, many technicians attend training classes or study after work in order to brush up on their knowledge. By passing difficult, national tests, ASE-certified technicians prove their technical competency to themselves, their employers and to their customers.

ASE certifies only the technical competence of individual technicians, not the shop, its business practices, or the ethics of management and employees. But it stands to reason that shop owners who encourage their mechanics to become certified technicians will be concerned about the other aspects of their business. Likewise, because ASE's program is voluntary, technicians who have gone to the effort to earn ASE certification can be counted on to have a strong sense of pride in accomplishment.

How does ASE certification work?

More than 100,000 technicians take ASE certification tests each May and November at more than 600 national locations. Technicians who pass at least one exam in their specialty and fulfill the two-year work experience requirement become ASE-certified. Those who pass a battery of exams earn Master Technician status.

There are more than two dozen specialty exams covering all major areas of repair. There are eight tests for automobile technicians alone: engine repair, engine performance, electrical/electronic systems, brakes, heating and air conditioning, suspension and steering, manual drive train and axles, and automatic transmissions. There are also exams for collision repair/refinish technicians, engine machinists, parts specialists and medium/heavy truck technicians.

Certification is not for life. ASE requires its technicians to recertify every five years to keep up with technology. All ASE credentials have expiration dates.

How to find ASE-certified technicians

Repair establishments with at least one ASE-certified technician are permitted to display the ASE sign and otherwise publicize their certified employee(s). Each ASE technician is issued personalized credentials listing his/her exact area(s) of certification and an appropriate shop sign. Technicians are also issued wall-sized certificates that their employers often post in the customer-service area.

Choosing an ASE-certified technician

As is the case with doctors, automotive technicians often specialize. Because ASE offers certification in all major technical areas of auto repair and service, it's wise to ask the shop owner or service manager specifically for a technician who is ASE certified in the appropriate area, say, brakes, engine repair or air conditioning.

In short, the ASE program offers consumers objective information about the technical competency of individual technicians that they can use in their search for satisfactory automotive repair and service.

If you have ever changed every 3,000 miles, an air filter every 15,000 miles, consider this:

At 40 miles per hour, your car flows through the air filter system at a rate of 120 gallons per minute. After 3,000 miles, four or five quarts of gasoline are in the system that you don't want. It's the 15,000 miles that have the oil filter.

If your car gets 20 miles per gallon, it will burn 20 gallons of air. Even at an average of 13.2 million gallons of air, this air filter will last 24,000 miles. The tons of air (at 60°F) that pass through the air filter and the temperature and pressure can cause you to lose oil that lubricates the engine is picked up by the engine's oil pump.

Here's why oil filters should be changed often

If you have ever wondered why an oil filter should be changed every 3,000 miles or an air filter every 24,000 miles, consider this:

At 40 miles per hour, oil flows through the lubrication system at a rate of 3.5 gallons per minute — in other words, 210 gallons per hour.

After 3,000 miles, it's not the four or five quarts of oil in the system that you have to worry about. It's the 15,000 gallons of oil that have passed through the oil filter.

If your car gets 20 miles per gallon, it will burn two gallons of gasoline and 20,000 to 24,000 gallons of air in one hour. Even at an average 20 mpg, this air filter will have cleaned 13.2 million gallons of air over 24,000 miles. That is roughly 67 tons of air (at standard temperature and pressure).

This information comes from the engineers at Fram Filters. They have compiled some surprising statistics about oil and air filters and the damage dirt can cause to your engine.

Oil filters lubricate and cool the engine is picked up by the engine's oil pump, cleaned by the oil filter, and reused. It is vital that any dirt, or contamination, picked up by the circulating oil be removed before it is pumped back into the engine.

Even though the typical engine carries only four to five quarts of oil, constant recirculation means that an average 15,750 gallons have passed through the filter in 3,000 miles. That is why it is wise knowledgeable car owners usually think in terms of 3,000- to 3,500-mile oil and filter change intervals.

With regular maintenance, their engines should easily reach 100,000 miles. By that time 525,000 gallons — or 1,943 tons — of oil will have been filtered.

Oil circulating in an engine travels from hot areas to cooler ones, helping to equalize temperatures. Over time, engine heat evaporates some of the lighter, more volatile components of the oil, causing it to oxidize and thicken. As a result, it is no longer as effective a lubricant for the car's engine. This is one reason regular oil and filter changes are needed.

As combustion from the firing of fuel and air by the spark plugs pushes down the piston in an engine, moving parts are pushed toward each other with several tons of force. It's only a microscopic film of oil that prevents the parts from scraping together and destroying each other. Because the oil film is so thin, it must be clean; otherwise contaminants may come into contact with moving parts and damage them.

Meanwhile, the oil is picking up contamination. Some of it consists of combustion byproducts, such as soot, forced past the piston rings. When an engine is first started and oil has not been able to circulate completely, yet, moving parts will scrape together momentarily, causing some microscopic metal bits to get in the oil.

And while everyone has heard of leaks that let oil drip out of an engine, a defective oil filter or any leaks in the engine's intake air supply will let contaminants slip into the engine.

Air Filters
Engines consume vast amounts of air. Fram engineers note that an engine uses 10,000 to 12,000 gallons of air for each gallon of gasoline burned, and that a car delivering 20 mpg consumes about 550 gallons of air per mile.

The air filter is your car's first defense against harmful dirt; before it goes anywhere, air meets the filter. And, in spite of the huge amount of air that moves through it, an air filter only needs to be replaced after about 24,000 miles of normal driving.

Vacuum created by engine operation draws in the air needed for the engine to run. Considering the amount of air that an engine requires, it is critical that the air be filtered; any dust-laden air that gets in will cause excessive internal wear.

Engines have several places where vacuum leaks may occur, making it possible for unfiltered air to enter and cause damage. Dirty air can slip past an air filter element not properly positioned in its housing. An air filter element that has been dropped very likely does not fit correctly. It should be discarded.

Even though the typical engine carries only four to five quarts of oil, constant recirculation means that an average of 15,750 gallons have passed through the filter in 3,000 miles. That is why car owners think in terms of 3,000- to 3,500-mile oil and filter change intervals.

Leaks also may appear between the air filter housing and the carburetor or engine. Air filters that sit on top of the carburetor should have a gasket between the filter housing and the carburetor. These gaskets are often missing so check to see if it is there. If not, replace it.

If it is in place, check for signs of uneven contact and replace the gasket if it appears air may slip past it. Make sure that ductwork between remote-mounted filters and the engine has no leaks.

It is also possible for air leaks to develop in the engine itself. In the ATZ case of cars with carburetors, vacuum leaks on the engine's intake manifold are hard to ignore since they will cause the car to run roughly. Also, many accessories are vacuum-operated.

For example, if the cruise control works erratically, if the heater vents change from dash to floor to defrost, or if the power brakes become hard to use, a vacuum leak may be the cause. But these leaks affect more than just accessories. They also may impede operation of the brakes in addition to exposing the engine to potentially damaging dust.

For 100 years, cars have been a symbol

America has now passed the 100th anniversary of the automobile, commemorating more than a century-long love affair between owners and their cars. Once a luxury for the elite, the motor vehicle now is a basic necessity that is totally integrated into our lifestyles. Today, there are more registered motor vehicles than licensed drivers. The average American household owns 1.7 vehicles and spends more than 17 percent of its budget on transportation.

A major player in the evolution of the automobile, often taken for granted, is the person who fixes it. After all, the same holds true today as it did 100 years ago: if an automobile is properly cared for by its owner, it will provide a level of personal freedom, mobility, enjoyment and convenience like no other mode of transportation.

Remember when we thought about trading the old car in when it got to be about 6 years old? That's what people did in the mid-1970s. New car fever has calmed down considerably as new car prices soar, with an average new car sale, including tax, now beyond $20,000. The average car age now is 8.3 years.

A new Ford in 1934 cost $785 complete with heater and bumper guards. That's the car, incidentally, driven by Bonnie and Clyde when they made their getaway from Topeka. They drove it 7,500 miles in 23 days before their fatal ambush in Louisiana. Whether or not you plan to run it forever, as some people vow they'll do, or keep the car just a little longer, taking care of needed maintenance is a must.

Generally, your most economical transportation is the vehicle you already own. So, fixing it up makes good economic sense.

In the old days if a mechanic could fix one car, he could fix them all. Today, there are more than 22,500 light vehicle variations in make, model, style and engine. Onboard electronic control modules regulate engines, suspension, anti-lock brake systems, air bags, transmissions, and a host of other features.

In the future, computer-controlled systems will expand to include such things as variable pitch spoiler and ground effects panels, onboard navigational systems, infrared windshields for better night and bad weather vision and smart seats that adjust to voice commands.

The demand for higher levels of consumer satisfaction combined with federal regulations, have created the need for a new approach to service and repair. Therefore, the demand for talented and motivated young people to join the ranks of automotive service and repair is a necessity.

New car fever has calmed down considerably as new car prices soar.

We're keeping our cars longer than ever before

Marine pays visit to SEMC while on leave

Crisply uniformed Marine Lance Cpl. Jason Anderson, grandson of Frances Blencoe, who is employed in Environmental Services at St. Elizabeth Medical Center, seemed to bring the halls of the medical center to attention during his recent visit.

Jason, a 1997 graduate of Granite City High School, is home while on leave from a tour of duty in Okinawa, Japan. He and several of his friends joined the Marines just days after graduation.

Jason's duties include managing and maintaining vehicles and transportation of cargo and vital materials in support of the Third Medical Battalion, Okinawa.

In addition, he is a marksmanship instructor, maintaining the Marines' skills, an important part of the Corps since, as Jason says, "Every Marine is a rifleman."

Maxine Green

During his tour he has traveled to Australia, Thailand, Marshall Islands, Philippines, Guam and South Korea.

The Granite City High School Pom-Pom Squad won first place in the IDTA Competition at Althoff Catholic High School in Belleville on Jan. 23. Other pom squads participating were Belleville West, Belleville East, O'Fallon and Edwardsville.

Having the highest point total qualifies them for coming sectional and state competition. Vanessa Mattern is their coach and team members are Stephanie Ambuehl, Susan Baker, Kristian and Tiffany Bernatx, Lydia Bettorf, Megan Bilyeu, Ashley Bywater, Alyssa Churschiel, Tisha Gilliam, Sara Holbrook, Bonnie Hill, Candice Johnson, Meagan McKechn, Julie Mills, Lindsay Moore, Amy Pennell, Julie Scott, Jennifer and Stephany Smiddy, Kimberly Snell, Rachelle Wallace and Anna Welser.

Silver Dollar City's "Chosen Few Quartet" will be appearing in concert at 7 p.m. Feb. 5 at Suburban Baptist Church, 2500 St. Clair Ave. Members of the quartet are Ashley Elison, Scott Fraker, Casey Ellison, and Brian Arnold. They will be accompanied by Tracy Heaston, Brandon's Piano Player of the Year.

The Chosen Few have been a resident gospel group at Silver Dollar City since 1992 and have been nominated as 1998 Gospel Artist of the Year. The public is invited to attend and enjoy their unique style of Southern and contemporary gospel music.

This is a classroom refresher designed for older drivers and covers rules of the road, driving problems and license renewal requirements. Light refreshments will be served.

The cost is $8, payable to AARP. They will be accompanied by Tracy Heaston, Brandon's Piano Player of the Year.

Prior registration is required and can be obtained by calling 798-3201. Those 55 or older completing the course may qualify for a discount on the liability portion of their automobile insurance for three years.

A youth Super Bowl XXXIII party will be held at 4:15 p.m. Sunday at Suburban Baptist Church, 2500 St. Clair Ave. There will be live music, a guest speaker and big-screen TV tuned to Fox's coverage of the game between the Denver Broncos and Atlanta Falcons.

All youths in grades 6-12 are welcome.

Ann Landers' Valentines for Vets program seeking participants

Illinois ChildCorps and the Children's Home & Aid Society of Illinois are asking people to participate in the 10th annual Ann Landers' Valentines for Vets program.

Each year, hand-made valentines are collected and distributed to local Veterans' Administration hospitals and medical centers.

Last year, Illinois ChildCorps collected approximately 500 valentines from local schools and child care programs.

The program's honorary chair is internationally syndicated newspaper advice columnist Ann Landers. Her column, along with that of her sister Abigail Van Buren (Dear Abby), is a long-standing feature of thousands of newspapers in the United States, Canada and around the world. She has been a strong supporter of this program from its inception as a way of thanking veterans for their sacrifices.

Valentines will be collected until Feb. 5. Valentines can be delivered to Illinois ChildCorps, C/O Children's Home & Aid Society of Illinois, 2133 Johnson Road, Suite 101, Granite City, Ill., 62040.

For information call Rebecca Daniels at toll-free at (800) 467-9200, extension 125, or Lydia Arnold, extension 218.

Nancy Shipley, left, of Alan and Marval Walker of Cherokee Village, Ark. and former Granite City residents, and Wayne Childers, son of the late James-Homer and Alice Childers, are announcing their engagement and wedding. The couple will be married at Pontoon Baptist Church in Pontoon Beach Feb. 6.

WEDDING

Adrienne Ladavac
Nathan Coppedge

Ladavac-Coppedge

Adrienne Christine-Marie Ladavac and Nathan Wilson Coppedge were married on Sept. 5, 1998, at St. Rose Catholic Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Darko Ladavac of Highland. She is a 1992 graduate of Highland High School and is currently attending Belleville Area College. She is a teleprospector with Cten, the Uniform Company, in Highland.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gary Coppedge of Granite City. He is a 1993 graduate of Granite City High School and is employed as a ramp agent with Southwest Airlines.

Jodi McCabe attended her friend as maid of honor. Jason Bloome attended his friend as best man.

Others in the wedding party were Jason Langdoc, friend of the bride, as bride's best man; Chelsea Casper, friend of the bride, as junior bridesmaid; Bianca Kostanjsek, niece of the bride, as miniature bridesmaid; Jason Schnott, friend of the groom, as groomsman; Andy Parker, friend of the bride, and Jason Schnott, friend of the groom, as ushers.

Laura Loomis read the scriptures and programs and Vedrana Kostanjsek, niece of the bride, and Shaun Voegle, friend of the bride, handed out programs.

The couple is planning a honeymoon to Europe and now reside in Highland.

Blair School in Madison recently marked Dr. Martin Luther King's birthday with an all-school celebration. King's birthday was celebrated Jan. 18; the program, which had been delayed because of earlier winter storms, took place Jan. 22. Clockwise from top left, singing group Tecneeq performs for the audience; a Blair School student applauds during a point in the program; Doris Johnson recites a poem, "It Couldn't Be Done"; Lorraine Strauther, who has a granddaughter at Blair, signs in; and a number of publications dealing with King are displayed for those in attendance.

Train show on track here this weekend

By Val McDowell
Staff writer

Train enthusiasts can find a little bit of heaven this weekend at the Gateway Center in Collinsville when the annual Greenberg's Great Train and Collectible Toy Show pulls into town.

"This is one of the biggest events of this kind in the area," said Skip MacEwen of Belleville, a member of the Gateway G-Gauge Model Railroad Club. "People come from all over to attend, and they are not disappointed."

Train buffs and toy enthusiasts will have an opportunity to trade, sell or display their goods.

The event takes place Saturday and Sunday. It starts at 11 a.m. both days, ending at 5 p.m. Saturday and 4 p.m. Sunday.

Other highlights include HO- and N-scale railroad action on side-by-side layouts from the St. Charles Model Railroad Club; an action-packed layout by the Southern Illinois Train Club; and O-gauge trains operating in a scenic layout from the New Switzerland Model Railroad Club.

Admission is $5 for adults, $2 for children ages 6-12. Those 5 and younger get in free.

Golden Globes shed little light on Oscars

'Ryan,' 'Shakespeare' remain top contenders

There was something for everybody during the 56th Golden Globes awards, an unpredictable evening that set the stage for an unpredictable Oscar race.

When Jim Carrey wasn't making off-color quips, or Jack Nicholson wasn't remembering the Globe's less golden moments, Steven Spielberg was thanking U.S. fighting men for preserving democracy and ending the Holocaust. It was the kind of free-wheeling ceremony in which Christine Lahti could draw laughs by walking on stage with toilet paper stuck to her shoe, and Michael J. Fox and Gwyneth Paltrow could bring tears to the ballroom crowd with their emotional acceptance speeches.

"Saving Private Ryan" won best dramatic film and Spielberg was honored for directing the brutally realistic World War II combat story, while "Shakespeare in Love," "The Truman Show" and "Elizabeth" won major awards Sunday at the annual awards from the Hollywood Foreign Press Association.

The Globes, traditional

Oscar predictors, did little to help handicap the Academy Awards race. It was between "Ryan" and "Shakespeare" before the Globes, and it's between them still, with perhaps a little more push for "The Truman Show" and its award-winning star Carrey, who barely hid his Oscar aspirations.

Carrey jokingly thanked the "Academy" for his Globe award, which actually was selected by entertainment journalists—not the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. "No, I'm sorry I was thinking of something else," said Carrey, named best actor in a dramatic movie, beating out a field that included the strong acting of Ian McKellen of "Gods and Monsters." Carrey's co-star Ed Harris picked up a supporting actor trophy, setting the irreverent tone for much of the evening by putting a toothpick in his mouth and saying, "Oh, man, I just got through eating dinner."

McKellen's co-star Lynn Redgrave got a surprise supporting actress award as the gruff-but-loving maid in

"Gods and Monsters" and Michael Caine of "Little Voice" was best actor in a musical or comedy motion picture. "Oh, what a shock," Caine said. "My career must be slipping. This is the first time I've been available to pick up an award."

On a more serious note, Spielberg, whose film is a major contender for an Oscar, recalled "all the veterans that are out there that saved Western civilization and stopped the Holocaust in 1945." Backstage, he said: "I hope the movie is a way at looking back... and saying thanks to all of our grandfathers and fathers."

"Shakespeare in Love" won best comedy or musical film and picked up awards for star Paltrow—best actress in a comedy—and for screenplay. Paltrow fought back tears as she thanked her parents and her ailing grandfather.

Cate Blanchette of "Elizabeth" won best dramatic actress for her role as the title character in second movie set during the reign of Queen Elizabeth. Brazil's

"Da Noise' taps its way onto Fox Theatre stage

Show presents history of tap, African-Americans

Jimmy Tate performs the role of "da beat" in a scene from "Bring In 'Da Noise, Bring In 'Da Funk."

By Ronnie Roy
Staff writer

The hot, hip-hop Broadway musical, "Bring In 'Da Noise, Bring In 'Da Funk," taps its way to St. Louis for a limited engagement of eight performances this week. The show opened Tuesday and runs through Sunday at the Fox Theatre.

"Bring In 'Da Noise, Bring In 'Da Funk' is a musical that documents the history of the beat, which in this instance is tap, and also demonstrates the history of African-Americans," said Donna Walker-Kuhne, national coordinator for community outreach for the tour.

"What makes it exciting, you have young men tapping our history from Africa to the '90s in an ebullient style. It's historical, yet contemporary in its presentation."

Noise/Funk was conceived and directed by George C. Wolfe and choreographed by tap sensation Savion Glover. Wolfe spoke with Glover in the spring of 1995 about the possibility of doing a project at The Public Theater in New York City.

The show was put together over three weeks that summer in a workshop at the theater. The show combines Glover's tap choreography, poetry by Reg E. Gaines and music by Ann Duquesnay, Zane Marks and Daryl Waters.

The musical opened in November at The Public Theater, playing 92 performances through January, 1996. The show moved to Broadway that April and in May received nine Tony nominations. It went on to win four, including best direction for Wolfe and best choreography for Glover. Glover's work on the show also received a Drama Desk Award, an Outer Critics Circle Award, an Obie Award and a Fred Astaire Award.

Derick K. Grant, a member of the world premiere company at The Public Theater, recreates Glover's work for the tour.

Noise/Funk mixes blues, hip-hop, percussion and tap to present the history of African-Americans through the history of "the beat," from the slave ships to today's city streets.

"The opening number is a real blast," Walter-Kuhne said. "It combines all the elements of the show in an overture. There are four layers of information presented all at once."

While the show is about history, it also is about looking ahead. The tour company is heavily involved in outreach, providing tickets for young blacks and holding workshops in area schools to bring tap to the next generation.

"We wanted to target young black urban communities," Walker-Kuhne said. "We want to make sure they're able to see it, that includes taking the cast into the community."

Curtain times for Bring In 'Da Noise, Bring In 'Da Funk are 8 p.m. through Friday, 2 and 8 p.m. Saturday and 2 and 7:30 p.m. Sunday.

grad gets big chance

Vicki Mabrey is an anchor on new
'60 Minutes II'

By Cathy Pezold
Staff writer

There's a new show on Wednesday nights, and at least one St. Louis couple never misses an episode.

Native St. Louisan Vicki Mabrey is an anchor on the new CBS News magazine "60 Minutes II," which airs at 8 p.m. Wednesdays on KMOV-TV (Channel 4).

Her parents, Harold and Barbara Mabrey, live in Florissant. Barbara is a retired teacher from St. Louis public schools, and Harold is a retired procurement officer for the U.S. Army.

The Mabreys are a close family, and even when Vicki is away on assignment she calls home several times a week.

Vicki said she's settling into her new job on "60 Minutes
II."

"At first I was thinking,
'Can I do this?' because it's so much more intense than anything I've ever done," Vicki said. "But, now I'm starting to get the hang of it."

Vicki said her close family ties have kept her motivated.

"What really keeps me going is truly a fear of disappointing my family," Vicki said. "I have this strong desire to do things that would make my parents proud."

Vicki spent her early years in a two-family flat on Belt Avenue in north St. Louis, which was shared with Vicki's grandmother, aunts and a cousin.

"She completed third and fourth grade within the same school year," Barbara said of her daughter. "She was always an extremely good student.
She was reading before she was in kindergarten."

Vicki's parents said she has had the curiosity of a journalist since birth.

"Vicki was just that way.
When she was born, my father came to visit her in the hospital, and even though Vicki was his eighth grandchild, he thought there was something special about her," Barbara said.

"When all the other babies were crying at the hospital, she would just look around as if to say, 'What's going on around here to make all of them cry?"

Vicki's father agrees, and said she has always had a way with words.

"She has extremely good verbal skills, and when she was little she never talked baby talk," Harold said.

"Ever since she started talking, she talked in full sentences."

Vicki's parents said when it came time to go to school, she was ready and eager to start kindergarten, and she was always inquisitive.

"She was always such a little busybody," Barbara said. "If somebody was absent from class, she would have to check on them that night to make sure they were all right."

The Mabreys moved to Florissant when Vicki started fifth grade.

She graduated from McCluer Senior High in 1973, but wasn't planning to be a reporter.

"She wanted to be an urban planner," Barbara said. "She always loved the inner city. She wanted to work on revitalizing downtown."

Larry Marsh, 56, a social studies teacher for 33 years, taught Vicki in his political science class at McCluer.

"What I remember about Vicki is her intellect, curiosity, inquisitiveness," Marsh said. "She was wonderfully personable, very curious and smart."

"I remember her having remarkable insights as a young person, and her parents were such supportive parents."

Vicki said Marsh inspired her to study political science in college, and it wasn't until nearly 10 years after high school that Vicki decided to make a career change to broadcast journalism.

"It looked interesting, it looked fun, and it involved a lot of talking," Vicki said.

So she went back to school and studied journalism, which started her award-winning career.

Before her current challenge of "60 Minutes II," Vicki had been CBS' London correspondent since 1995 and was awarded two Emmys for covering the death of Princess Diana.

The Mabreys said they are proud of Vicki, and even though Vicki doesn't usually ask for parental advice about her TV appearances, that doesn't stop her mother.

"We give it to her whether she asks for it or not," Barbara said.

"When she looks tired, I tell her she's not getting enough sleep."

Super Bowl is more than football

Trivia

Kevin Carbery

By Kevin Carbery
Staff writer

There may be more to life than football, though not on Super Bowl Sunday. Even people who loathe the sport are forced to take notice that something is going on when the big game is played. They may only hear the commentators' voices in the background as they munch on hors d'oeuvres at a party, but they are aware of what is taking place.

I will admit that most Super Bowl games have been dogs, with one team pounding the other senseless. Nevertheless, there is always the hope that the play will be competitive. Last year's contest, with Denver beating Green Bay 31-24, was a pretty exciting game.

The first Super Bowl that I can remember paying attention to was the 1971 contest, when Baltimore beat Dallas 16-13. The Colts won with a field goal with only a little time left on the clock.

As the years went by, I kept watching as the Super Bowl games became more than sporting contests, turning into social events. By the time I was in college in the early 1980s, Super Bowl parties had become common and businesses were creating commercials specifically to be shown during the game.

The Super Bowl and side events associated with it are the topics of this week's trivia quiz.

1. The first meeting between champions of the NFL and the AFL took place on Jan. 15, 1967. What was the contest called?

2. What was the first year the contest was called the Super Bowl?

HOROSCOPE

THURSDAY, JAN. 28

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Jan. 28) This should be a year of romance and self-expression: Getting paid to do what you would do for fun is a most rewarding winter event. By the end of February, you may decide to begin anew in a different city. It's nice to know your talents aren't being wasted.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
Networking on downtime gets you ahead. Just be sure to find something genuinely interesting in others instead of constantly pushing your own cause.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
Love relationships are challenging. Just as needy individuals bother you, a partner is unhappy if he or she feels too responsible for your happiness. Knowing when to stay and when to go is half the battle.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21)
Try not to be too concentrated on change because tomorrow you'll likely want the original back. Someone kind picks up the tab this evening.

CANCER (June 22-July 22)
It's not enough to wish — today is about constant doing. A powerful kinship with an intellectual match is best kept platonic. Be wary of becoming too suggestible because you may want what another person has.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You have keen instincts and can easily discern between people who are your friends and those who want something. You inspire smart people to make a change.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
Utilize time-saving tools. You are not sure what to make of costly services. Big money for a little work may be fine if it's the right person working. The party atmosphere tonight desperately needs your good taste.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
Play with passive and active roles for the purpose of self-discovery. You would rather get along perfectly than prove your point. You can have it both ways, but you must take a romantic risk to find this out for certain.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21)
Maintaining your reputation is part of building for the future. Cultivate friendships with those who can help further your goals. Purely social times with frivolous people will bore you stiff. Gossip doesn't interest you now.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Unexpected opportunities come through relationships. Favors you did in the past are (See HOROSCOPE, Page 12D)

Vendors to brighten Downtown

Plan will go into effect this spring

By Clayton Berry
Staff writer

Street vendors could be selling their wares in Downtown St. Louis as early as this spring.

The St. Louis Board of Aldermen recently approved a bill allowing vendors Downtown for the first time in many years.

The number of vendors in the area will not be unlimited, however. Only seven of them can set up shop on sidewalks in the Downtown area bounded by Tucker Boulevard, Chouteau Avenue, Washington Avenue and the Mississippi River. Three others can hawk their goods in city parks, namely Kiener Plaza.

Alderman Phyllis Young, D-7th Ward, sponsored the legislation.

"In the spring, when vendors are on the streets, they will be more likely to draw people out of the offices onto the streets," she said. "And hopefully, it will keep tourists down there a little longer enjoying the activities."

Before business can begin, though, officials with the streets and parks departments must set up rules and regulations to enforce the ordinance. That could take between 30 and 45 days, said Pat Connaghan, counsel to the board of aldermen.

Potential vendors first must obtain a business license from the license collector's office. Then they must quickly vie for one of the 10 permits.

There are a number of restrictions that apply. For example, vendors will not be allowed to be within 150 feet of an existing business that sells a similar product.

In the bill's early stages, city officials would have selected the 10 spots. But that now will be left up to the vendors.

"We haven't allowed vendors in Downtown in a long time," Young said. She said officials may need to alter the bill as problems arise.

The bill also addresses years of confusing and conflicting ordinances still on city books. Many terms were outdated. The definition of a peddler, for example, dates back to 1912 and refers to a person who sells medicines and lightning rods. The new ordinance deletes that definition.

Globes — 'Heart': One out of six ain't good

"Central Station" captured the foreign language film award.

In the television categories, the Hollywood Foreign Press Association voted ABC's "The Practice" as best television drama series, and Fox's "Ally McBeal" won as best television comedy series. Both are produced David Kelley. "Spin City" star Michael J. Fox, who has been diagnosed with Parkinson's disease, was a funny but poignant winner for TV comedy actor. He thanked his doctors, including one he said had opened up his brain. "We're so lucky to do what we do... and just take every day and enjoy it," Fox said.

The awards, broadcast from a hotel ballroom by NBC, were plagued by problems with sound cutting out and the picture freezing momentarily.

The Golden Globes are awarded for film and television in what can be a more colorful affair than the stodgier Academy Awards. Last year, Lahti was in the bathroom when she was announced as a winner for "Chicago Hope." This year she showed up as a presenter with toilet paper stuck to a shoe.

One award was announced before the ceremony: Nicholson was honored with the Cecil B. DeMille Award for his "outstanding contribution to the entertainment field." In his speech, he reminisced about the bawdy antics of Joan Crawford and Rita Hayworth in bygone Golden Globe awards. "I like fun. What can I say?" Nicholson said.

Too many plots, not enough time

By Ronnie Roy
Staff writer

People desperately seeking love loving people desperately trying to avoid it.

It's not "Next on 'Oprah,'" — it's the new film "Playing By Heart."

Director Willard Carroll presents a tangled tale of 11 characters looking for love, or pretending not to, in Los Angeles. The players are:

• Hanna and Paul (Gena Rowlands and Sean Connery). She wants to talk about his health problems, he doesn't. He wants to explain a past relationship to her, she doesn't want to hear about it. Despite these communication problems, they are about to celebrate their 40th wedding anniversary.

• Meredith and Trent (Gillian Anderson and Jon Stewart). She is a theater director with a miserable past history with relationships. He is her Mr. Right, if he can just scale that wall she's put up around herself.

• Gracie and Roger (Madeleine Stowe and Anthony Edwards) are carrying on a "Same Time, Next Week" relationship. They leave their unsatisfying home lives behind for evenings of uncomplicated sex. Except Roger is beginning to want more.

10. Who was head coach of the Oakland Raiders when they won Super Bowl XI in 1977?

ANSWERS: 1. The AFL-NFL World Championship Game. Green Bay beat Kansas City 35-10 in the contest. 2. 1969, for the third title game between AFL and NFL champs, which the Jets won. 3. Apple Macintosh computers. 4. The Dallas Cowboys, who are 5-3 in their eight appearances. 5. San Francisco, piling up 55 points while crushing Denver in Super Bowl XXIV in 1990. 6. "3rd Rock From the Sun." 7. Up With People, an excruciatingly bad musical collective. 8. "In Living Color." 9. Scott Norwood. 10. John Madden.

Ryan Phillippe and Angelina Jolie in a scene from "Playing By Heart."

MOVIE REVIEW

• Joan and Keenan (Angelina Jolie and Ryan Phillippe). She is a chatterbox actress who spends her evenings in dance clubs.

• Hugh (Dennis Quaid) is the odd man out. A mystery man, he shows up every night at a different bar, with a different tale to tell.

• The final players are Mark and Mildred (Jay Mohr and Ellen Burstyn). He is dying from AIDS; she is his mother. In a hospital room they try to connect in his last days.

The film cuts back and forth among these characters over the course of eight days and nights — mostly nights. Getting the most attention are the young couple Joan and Keenan, and with good reason. Jolie delivers a dynamic performance and Phillippe is her quiet equal.

Unfortunately, six stories are hard to address sufficiently in a two-hour film, so the other characters suffer by comparison.

There are some clever plot twists, as all the myriad stories come together (hints are dropped throughout the film), but "Playing By Heart" is finally just an upscale "Love Boat" episode on land. Most of the relationship problems get quickly resolved in time for the big ending.
